

Abstract

This thesis shall deal with the study of the effects of the China-Taiwan conflict with respect to the law of the sea. To this purpose, several hypothesis about the evolution and the possible resolution of the conflict shall be explored, and their consequences from a maritime point of view shall be analysed. Then, based on those hypothesis, the new issues that may arise throughout the evolution of the conflict in the Taiwan Strait, such as those related to maritime delimitations or other issues involving the law of the sea, shall be dealt with so as to address them in a satisfactory manner with respect to international law.